WORKING ON STEAM PLANE

Navy Department Hopeful for New Airship.

Washington, June 12.—Navy department experiments indicate that the steam-driven seaplanes may solve the motor problem of air navigation. Many officers believe that only the question of getting the weight of the steam plant down to the lowest possible figure remains to be answered before a steamer of the air is constructed and tried out.

Experimental work was begun many months ago and an improved plant consisting of a boiler similar to those used in steam locomotives and compact steam turbines has been thoroughly tested. Those in charge of the work will not discuss it further than to say that they are very hopeful for a successful outcome.

Steam equipment would guarantee constancy of power, upon which aeroplanes depend for stability. Most accidents to aviators, it is pointed out, have been due to failure of the motors.

Steam turbines also would provide power far in excess of anything now obtainable with gasoline, it is said.

(Special to The Herald)

New York, June 12.—Hughes, who was expected to arrive here this morning for important political conferences. While here he will meet the special convention committee headed by Senator Murray Crane which is to fix the time and place of the official notification.

The first plans for Mr. Hughes' campaign are now in the making. They include the selection of a campaign manager who may be Frank Hitchcock, former postmaster general. Upon his arrival at the Hotel Astor Mr. Hughes said that he would remain in New York until certain matters were disposed of. He refused to discuss any light upon the nature of these political matters. Among those with whom it is certain Mr. Hughes will confer with while here are Governor Whitman, Frederick Tinner, the chairman of the Republican state committee and George W. Wickersham, former attorney general. After six years upon the bench Mr. Hughes has been out of touch with politics and he is relying upon his advisors for information and guidance. Headquarters will be opened here at once and he will make a number of speeches. Secretary Green was asked if Mr. Hughes would confer with Col. Roosevelt while here. "I am not at liberty to say anything about Mr. Hughes' plans," he replied.

DEMOCRATS ON WAY TO ST. LOUIS

The Existing Harmony Doesn't Please
Leaders--Wish to Stir Up a Fight

(Special to The Herald)

St. Louis, June 12.—No party has a monopoly on patriotism. The Democratic party has kept the nation out of war. It should be retained in power. These are the twin slogans for the coming national campaign. They will be expressed by the Democratic leaders to retain the party in control of the nation's affairs. They will be played night and day from the instant the Democratic national convention adjourns here late on Friday night, until the polls close next November.

The vanguard of the Democratic hosts who plan to renounce President Wilson was streaming into St. Louis today. The "big chiefs" were on the ground and the rank and file of the Democracy on the way. The national convention which will open here on Wednesday promises to be largely attended. With the party in power there are plenty of office holders to swell the multitude, but the existing harmony that is in evidence does not satisfy the leaders. If these men who are handling the platform for the convention can start a fight, they will be pleased. They frankly admitted this in their private conversations here today. They are greatly opposed to the present apathy covering the party representatives arriving here. They fear that because of over confidence among the party rank and file throughout the country, it may be hard to get the campaign started with the kind of hurrah they want. The national committeemen from the East have made it very plain to their colleagues from the West and South that the nomination of Justice Hughes means that the party will have to keep a solid front and be ready for a much more carefully planned line of attack than was confronted four years ago.

SLOOP YACHT DRIFTS AGAINST KITTERY BRIDGE

CARRIED UP-RIVER BY STRONG
TIDE AND WAS TOWED TO SAFETY BY THE TUG PISCATAQUA.

Two young men, attached to the U. S. S. Washington, escaped serious injury yesterday afternoon when their auxiliary sloop yacht the Isabelle became unmanageable off the beacon in the harbor and drifted with the strong tide up the river, crashing into the Portsmouth and Kittery bridge. The tug Piscataqua of the Piscataqua Navigation Company, went to the assistance of the yacht and succeeded in towing her back to the company's wharf, on the Portsmouth side of the river.

The yacht is listed as being owned by Clark and Buckley of the Washington and they reported that owing to engine troubles they were unable to reach any point of shore when they made the attempt after the break down of the beacon. The strong incoming tide swept the little craft up the river at a fast rate of speed and crashed her into the bridge close to the draw at the Kittery end. Both young men, who were aboard at the time, feared that the yacht would be broken apart before assistance could be secured but the tug, which was passing through the draw at the time, changed her course and towed her to a place of safety. Repairs were made to the engine and the yacht put into the Portsmouth Yacht Club, later returning to the mooring at Kittery Point.

HAMPTON BEACH MUCH IMPROVED SINCE THE FIRE

BETTER HOTELS AND COTTAGES
HAVE BEEN ERECTED OVER
THE TERRITORY BLACKENED
LAST FALL.

Arthur B. Burns, in an article published in Sunday's Boston American, has shown the wonderful improvements which have been made at Hampton Beach in the short time elapsing since a great part of the beach was destroyed by fire last September. He calls the improvements "striking" and predicts a continued policy for the betterment of the popular seaside playground of New Hampshire, practically all that the state can boast. His article follows:

In September, 1915, following a prosperous carnival week, the beach section at Hampton, N. H., was swept by a most unfortunate fire, wiping out many of the large hotels and cottages. Six months later, one will find difficulty in locating any ruins, on quickly have the owners rebuilt. Never in the history of a burned district have people rebuilt and increased in betterments such as these united people in this beautiful beach section have done. Through the cold black winter, they have done all this, showing remarkable courage and great determination in losing no time in helping intact the wonderful reputation made by famous Hampton Beach, New Hampshire's leading ocean resort, and it can be truly said, that it is now bigger and better than ever.

Striking Improvements

Some of the striking improvements are the electric tracks moved to the ocean front, giving a new boulevard road about seventy feet wide and nearly one mile long; new concrete walks increased to about ten feet wide; new breakwater from Cutter's Hotel to Bear's Head; Marsh Avenue and Ocean Avenue widened and new concrete walks installed; additional arc lights making total of over 100 and 3,000 arc colored lights.

The enlarged rebuilt hotels are numerous. The Ashworth, George Ashworth proprietor, is a most magnificent hotel with all modern improvements, with exceptionally large reception, convention and banquet halls. The interior effect is white enamel and hard wood. The Imperial, F. J. O'Dea, proprietor, nicely appointed and splendid location, interior scheme decoration Flemish. The Fairview, James P. Garfield, proprietor, beautiful ocean front location; handsome structure, the last word in modern hotel construction. The Lawrence House, Charles H. Cutler, proprietor and manager, has a well appointed house. Interior decoration in keeping with architectural plan. This popular house is much larger than ever. Graves & Rinsdell of the Casino have made many improvements. Fred Carr of Hill Crest Hotel fame, has made extensive alterations. Henry W. Ford, Pelham Hotel, has enlarged and predicts a full house. Cutter's Sea View, The New Pentucket, White Rock, and the Atlantic House anticipate and are well prepared for a big season.

Trade Board Praised

The rapidity with which the beach section was rebuilt and the many improvements installed was due in a large measure to the unceasing activity of the Hampton Beach Board of Trade, to whom too much praise cannot be given for remarkable results achieved. The continued activity of this organization will place Hampton Beach eventually in the position which she is entitled to namely, the finest and best appointed summer resort on the Atlantic seaboard. This year thousands of visitors from all over New England and from the West and South, will flock to this popular summer resort to enjoy the bathing, fishing and the cooling ocean breezes in conjunction with beautiful auto roads and country scenes that lie close to the beach.

HAWAII'S WATERS TEEM WITH GAME FISH, SAY NIMRODS

Honolulu, Hawaii, U. S. A.—Several midland game fishermen who journeyed to the Hawaiian Islands last winter, made the important discovery that there were more game fish in the waters surrounding the Hawaiian Islands than in many of the favored sections on the American main which they had previously considered the "only fishing grounds" extent. Among these fishermen were James W. Jump of Los Angeles, E. K. Burnham of Martinez, Cal., Harold Morris of Denver and many others. Instead of remaining two weeks, these game fishermen extended their visit throughout the winter and spring, and were fishing constantly, particularly in quest of the elusive tuna. The result was that Jump, Morris and Burnham were awarded special prizes by the Hawaii Tuna Club of Honolulu for catches of tuna, and they were also presented with silver cups.

Mr. Jump, who is a member of the Catalina Tuna Club, won the highest award in catching a 32 1/2-pound kaku with light tackle on March 13, at Kaula, Maui. This catch won the Geo. J. Cooke silver cup offered for the first game fish over thirty pounds taken on light tackle. Mr. Jump will bring his high-power fishing boat from Catalina to Honolulu next winter, and Morris will build another summer, his first boat, the Dible Mar, having been lost in a storm.

Several of the Catalina Island fishermen, who were burned out at Avala last winter, have already established themselves at Halewa, thirty miles from Honolulu, with their fishing boats and glass-bottom sight-seeing boats. The Hawaii Tuna Club expects a large number of the most prominent game fishermen in the United States to visit the islands next winter.

"Weather permitting" which looks doubtful this evening, the annual field day of the enlisted men of the 156th company, C. A. C., will be held today at Fort Constitution. The program will require the entire day to complete and the athletic sports and races will be held in the forenoon, ending with a baseball game in the afternoon. In event of rain the field day will be postponed to a day later in the week.

The members of the Camp Fire Girls were disappointed that their first field day, scheduled for last Saturday, had to be postponed on account of the disagreeable weather. About eighty girls from this city had made arrangements to attend the meeting at Exeter where they would have been joined by nearly 200 others from all of the Camp Fires of Rockingham County. The committee in charge of the day has decided to hold the meeting a week from this coming Saturday, June 21.

Some people are blaming the Portsmouth Driving Club for the mean weather and are suggesting that the Memorial Day races, postponed three times, be set off for three months. It is doubtful if this meeting has anything to do with the weather as the members of the club are as anxious to get the meeting over as are the fans interested in the sport. Sports have suffered greatly by the rain and so has practically everything else.

The boxing fans are going to have another opportunity to see Joe Startz in action against a fast man on June 21 when the matchmaker of the Rockingham A. C. has stacked him against Dave Powers of Malden, Mass. The navy boxer, who met Eddie Flynn in this city some few weeks ago, and who impressed the fans favorably with his peculiar style of action, will have an entirely different man against him this time. The bout will go ten or more three-minute rounds and some pretty fast action is looked for.

Other bouts which Mr. Dow is expecting to announce for this evening will be a day or so will be between Steve Travers of Hildesford, one of the best little 115 pound youngsters in Maine and Young McArthur of Portland.

The third number on the card will likely be a bout between Young Chaspar of Manchester and Patric Green of Cambridge, Mass. Green is a new one to the Portsmouth fans although well known in and about Boston. For a number of years Patric Green was the amateur champion featherweight of New England and has been holding up his end in the professional ranks since he entered the game. Chaspar is too well known to need any comment and this should prove a big drawing card for the fans.

Mike Glover and his manager George Freeman think that Mike won't have an extra hard time defeating Kid Lewis at the Armory A. A. where the 12 round bout for welterweight honors will be decided. The last time they met Glover really outlasted the Englishman and it's an old adage with fighters that once they defeat a man they feel certain they can do again. It does not hold however in all cases but in this particular meeting when Glover will appear in better form than he has for many of his other fights the South Boston man was never more confident of winning.

This welterweight claim of Jack Britton's is a huge joke to Glover. The former bases his claim on the strength of his defeat of Ted Lewis at New Orleans. Glover defeated Lewis long before Britton did and he feels that he has just as much right to claim the championship and more too than Britton has. Furthermore there is no knowing what weight Britton boxed at, while the Glover and Lewis bout was a genuine welterweight battle boxed at 142 pounds. Britton has been in the habit of dictating his terms to the men he has fought and when he met Mike O'Dowd in a contest that was supposed to be for welterweight honors both O'Dowd and he were away above the 142 pound mark. When Glover and Lewis meet it will be at the welterweight mark.

No matter what happens the winner of next Tuesday night's bout will have a much better claim to championship honors than Jack Britton. Since that little affair between O'Dowd and Britton last week a good many have changed their minds about Jack Britton's fighting ability. Some say that Britton never could fight against a man who will carry the fighting in him while others still maintain that he is a great fighter. Well Mike Glover has defeated him and cleaned up everything else in the class. If Britton fought the best he knew, against O'Dowd, we have to predict what would happen to his championship aspirations if Mike Glover faced him in the ring that night.

Both Glover and Lewis have had good rests since their last fighting took place. They realize that there is no recognized welterweight champion who has a clear claim to the title and each will strive his hardest to win next Tuesday night's bout. There has been a mix-up over the championship, over some Melody and Wolcott were removed from the game and until someone shows a genuine ability to defend titular honors will they be hailed in the true light of a champion.

BOSTON ITEMS

Boston, June 12.—Preparedness in trade supplies is objected to by the keynote of the meetings of the National Retail Hardware Association convention which opens in Mechanics building tomorrow night. The convention will last three days.

Tonight has been designated as "Preparedness Night" and the delegates to the convention will hold a stag dinner at the New American House with Mr. T. Hodge acting as chairman.

Mr. D. Fletcher Barber of Boston, who was elected president of the National Association at the convention held in St. Paul, Minn., last year will preside at the convention and the members of the New England Hardware Dealers' Association will unite with the National Association in making the gathering a great business event for Boston and the rest of New England.

The ladies' committee under the leadership of Mrs. H. M. Sanders, will hold many social events at the Hotel Lenox, which is to be the headquarters of the delegates. There will be auto tours, sea trips, pop concerts, trips along the North Shore and a big outing at Nantasket on Friday. The delegates and their ladies will also have the services of the Boy Scouts who will act as guides on "seeing Boston" tours.

Dr. F. H. Pratt, chief of the U. S. Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce will address the convention at the morning session tomorrow, and before the convention adjourns the delegates are also expected to listen to addresses by Governor Samuel W. McCall, Mayor James M. Curley and Frank E. Stacy, former president of the N. E. H. D. A.

Boston dancing teachers are not in favor of the edict of the dancing masters' convention in New York which would mean the abolition of the "Dumby Hug," "Juno Duck," "Walk the Dog" and other dances of a similar nature and a return to the old fashioned two step and other terpsichorean standards.

It was the consensus of opinion at the convention that modern dancing has lost its luster and that the future of the art depended upon simplicity. The Boston teachers, however, declare that if the novelty is taken out of dancing, interest in the ballroom will wane.

Mr. F. H. Norman, a former president of the Dancing Masters' Association who is one of the chief advocates of the return to old-fashioned dancing says:

"The new thing in dancing is the old-fashioned waltz. The two-step is not being danced under that name—yet. But I would not be surprised to see its return in all its dignity and simplicity. For already the two-step is being used in every dance."

Under the direction of forty graduates of agricultural colleges tutoring in Massachusetts, nearly 600 boys in Massachusetts are studying to become expert farmers through the facilities provided by the state-led agricultural departments connected with high schools in the state but the work has been so successful that State Commissioner of Education David S. Snowden is of the opinion that boys are realizing a neat profit as a result of their efforts.

RALPH BRACKETT WILL LEAD NINE AT STATE COLLEGE

UNANIMOUSLY ELECTED CAPTAIN OF NEW HAMPSHIRE STATE BASEBALL TEAM FOR NEXT YEAR.

Ralph D. Brackett of Greenland and Portsmouth, a member of one of the best of the baseball families of this section, was unanimously elected captain of the New Hampshire Baseball team for 1917 on Saturday by the members of the team and the college athletic association. Brackett is a member of the class of 1915 and the college will have his valuable services as an athlete for at least two more seasons. During his three years at the college he has been prominent in athletics and has been awarded his letter three times in baseball and has been the varsity manager in football at quarterback for three seasons.

In his baseball work Brackett was for two years a tower of strength at third base but was shifted this year to his position behind the bat, the place he has filled so well in the Sunnyside game in this city for several seasons as a member of the A. C. team. At the bat he has hit for .321 in the college games this season, a pretty high mark for a member of the battery. Before going to New Hampshire College he was prominent in athletics at Phillips Exeter Academy.

At the meeting on Saturday the Athletic Association awarded the letters to the baseball men entitled to them for this season. In addition to Brackett from this city another Portsmouth boy landed, Bill Shuttleworth, one of the pitchers of last year's Portsmouth High School and the Y. M. C. A. Sunset League team, was named. The letters were awarded in the morning by Coach W. H. Cowell as follows:

Shuttleworth, Moody, Atkins, Brackett, Humblston, Blissell, Morrison, Messer, Irvine, Blanchard, Cullinan and Manager Nelson.

WITH THE SPORTS

Oh, sing a song of six bits
Coffers full of dough,
Baseball magnates full of glee,
Watch the turnstiles go,
Round and round the wheels do spin,
Every afternoon,
Jeans of megals bulging so
They may bust quite soon.

The above jingle when properly translated will convey the fact that baseball has come back. The crowds, so far this season have been uniformly large, in some towns where the teams are wallowing around in the cellar, the attendance has not been sufficient to force out a "restored" squad of police. But in the municipalities where the home gang is on or near the top, the reward has come in busy gate receipts.

The Indians so far this year drew almost as many fans in the first home games as they did in all the 77 at home contests a year ago. The Senators are pulling great not only in their own pasture but also abroad. The Yankees crowds, with only about 45 of the games played, almost equal the grand total for the whole of the 1915 season. The amazing spirit of the Giants has turned out crowds everywhere—and especially at home.

The Tigers, White Sox and Red Sox haven't been doing as well as was expected, but they are drawing a sizeable number of patrons. The Braves and the Phillies are attracting well, while the Dodgers this season have been playing to crowds far beyond any in the modern history of the Brooklyn outfit.

Puzzle.—Who does Al Manage?

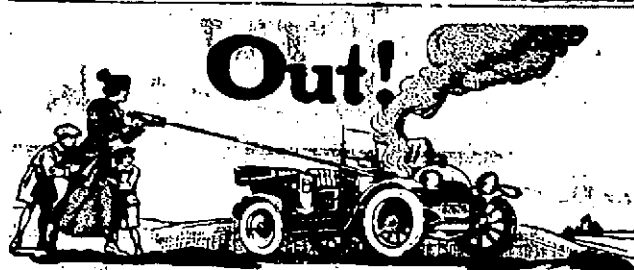

Al manage sends this:
"In the entire world today there is not a single middleweight fighter exhibiting the class, speed, punch and all around endurance of Jeff Smith. He has met and defeated not alone the best men in his class in this country, but has gone to every part of the world in search of men shifty enough to give him a battle."

"Jeff has one burning ambition and that is to meet Dillon, whom he is confident of winning. He regards Al McCoy as an alleged champion and not even worthy of consideration in a serious manner."

The Yankees apparently have picked up a star in catcher Al Walters. The youngster was the third stringer when the season began. Then Nune-maker was rendered hors d'oeuvre and a while later Alexander was out of the battle by an injury.

That gave Walters a chance and he has made good with a whoop. The kid is the peppery youngster seen in a New York uniform in years. He has shown fine backslapping ability, and has a great whip can hit with the best catchers in the game and has a remarkable knack of steadying the pitchers.

It's a treat to watch Walters in action. He is on the alert all the time and he has a brain so nimble that he frequently has outguessed the enemy and beaten them to it when they have attempted a bit of baseball trickery.

POLITICIANS TO BLAME FOR WASTE OF CITY MONEY

Contractor, Who Has Done Work for Portsmouth, Says that Contractors Are Forced by Circumstances to Charge Municipalities More Than a Job is Worth

George Warren, president of the Warren Brothers Company of Boston, a firm of contractors which has done a great amount of contracting for New England cities, this city among others, assisted the waste in work done for cities on the streets in an interview with the Boston American on Saturday. Mr. Warren said that the greatest fault lies with the cities and their politicians and that they are responsible for the high cost of work to the cities. Politicians force the contractors, he said, to put on "worthless" men and to meet "unnecessary" requirements. Ineffectually, he said, it would cost millions to put the streets of Boston into perfect condition.

Contractors who take city work, he said, must figure on the necessity of finding jobs for people sent to the contractors by politicians; and he said these men were for the most part inefficient.

"Worthless," he called them.

Warren Brothers is one of the largest paving firms in the world, and does an international business. The Finance Commission and Councilor Storow have been attacking the concern's prices. The company is controlled by Boston men, its main office is here, and it has thousands of employees.

City Officials Insist

The conditions imposed by the city, Mr. Warren said, are opposed by reputable contractors. They exist, he said, because the city officials insist on them; and he said he saw no hope of improvement.

"The politicians," said Mr. Warren,

"increase the cost to the city of public work by forcing upon the contractor conditions which must be considered in bids.

"There are many ways of harassing contractors who will not consent to these conditions, and so if the contractor wants to stay in business he must put the cost into his price for the work.

"One of the most annoying handicaps is the matter of giving jobs to men recommended by city officials. The man is usually worthless or nearly so and nearly always wastes the job as 'watchman' or 'weight' or 'padding' or some other position where there is no real work to be done. These men cannot be charged on the work and, of course, this charge must be taken into account when the contractor estimates his price for the job. These men are practically worthless and do little or no necessary work.

Contractors Opposed

"In the case of my firm the charges of this kind are small. There are other things which must be put up with but which I cannot discuss here. It is almost superfluous to say that no reputable contractor desires these conditions nor wants to perpetuate them. But the politicians insist.

"I have made a study of Boston's streets and believe that several million dollars will be required to put them in proper condition. One of the principal troubles in the past has been financial, that is, taking street repair money from the general fund raised by taxation."

DEMOCRATS OPEN FIGHT ON CANDIDATE HUGHES

St. Louis, Sunday.—The hopes of the democratic host which has arrived for the party's National Convention rose when the news came that the progressive party had named Mr. Roosevelt to run for the Presidency in opposition to Mr. Hughes, and fell again when the word was received that Mr. Roosevelt had declined. A republican party means a hard fight for the re-election of President Wilson on November 7, the leaders agree.

"Justice and Just Ice," an epigram of Albert B. Hoyt, assistant secretary of the National Committee, was jubilantly passed through the crowded lobbies of the hotels after the announcement of the republican nomination of Mr. Hughes and Charles Warren Fairbanks, but later counsels of the democratic politicians smiled and then grew deliberative when they heard it.

"Not Strongest—Nor Weakest"

William F. McCombs, national chairman said of the republican ticket that it was "neither the strongest nor the weakest that could have been chosen."

"Now we are ready for the battle," he said. "The unknown quantity of Justice Hughes is not an especially vote-getting trait, and this is peculiarly true when President Wilson's policies are so well known."

"The record of the President, the needs of the country and the organization of the democratic party, coupled with the action of the republicans and progressives, leave no doubt of the result of the November election."

Senator Thomas Taggart, of Mr. Fairbanks' home state of Indiana, smiled his characteristic smile and said, "I feel sorry for Charles."

St. Louis has gone the limit in providing a welcome for the delegates. Committees have been organized by states to meet and look after the welfare of different delegations as they arrive, and the Convention guests as well. The city has been arraying itself in gala attire today, and the balaclava touches were put on the big Convention Hall.

Most of the members of the National Committee will be here by tonight, and on Monday the first formal meeting will be held. There will be little for the committee to do, however, except to ratify the action of the Committee on Arrangements, which has perfected the programme of temporary organization, with Martin H. Glynn, formerly Governor of New York, as the temporary chairman of the Convention and the "keynote."

Three Minor Contests

There are only three minor contests for the committee to hear. Two of these involve delegates from the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico and the other concerns the national citizenship for Texas. The matter of the delegates will be disposed of in short order and precedent probably will determine the issue between William Polakdexter and Thomas D. Love, each of whom seeks the seat in the committee now held by Cato Sells, Indian Commissioner, who has not resigned his committee seat.

In recognition of the American flag and in view of the fact that the opening day of the Convention falls on Flag Day, arrangements have been made for its proper observance. Every delegate, alternate and guest upon entering the Coliseum will be presented with a miniature copy of the national banner. Then at an appointed moment in the proceedings, the first mention of the emblem by the "keynote" an immense flag will unfold from the roof of the hall and the eagles will be expected to scream so that the greeting may be heard in every part of the hall.

Awaiting Platform

Members of the National Committee are anxiously awaiting the arrival of Senator William J. Stone, who is expected to bring to St. Louis a copy of the platform as drafted by President Wilson. Whatever additions or alterations are made, if any, it is admitted, will be of a minor nature.

Much interest centres now in the probable selection of a chairman of the National Committee to succeed Mr. McCombs. The opinion among the committeemen is that the honor, which is something to be determined by the candidate, will fall to Homer J. Cummings, of Connecticut. Mr. Cummings has been a member of the National Committee for twenty years and its vice chairman for the last four years. As such he assisted in the campaign of four years ago, and his selection, it is said, would meet with a high degree of favor among his associates.

Mr. Cummings has been a "life long democrat since 1895." He was one of the few eastern republicans who came out for Mr. Bryan in that year, and has since been unwavering in his loyalty to the democratic party.

MORE IMPORTS—LESS REVENUE

Washington, (Special Correspondence) At a time when the Democratic administration is laboring with the problems of raising sufficient revenue, and when the American business men are anxious over the competition, this country must meet when peace has been restored to Europe. It is important to note that under the Democratic tariff law we are now importing more goods than ever before and receiving therefrom the smallest customs revenue.

When $213,600,000 worth of goods were imported into this country in March, everyone thought the high record for imports had last been reached. But April beat it by $1,200,000. On that, $215,800,000 worth of imports were realized customs duties in the sum of only $15,926,615. In April, 1913, under the Republican law, we imported goods to the value of $146,131,000 on which duty was collected in the sum of $23,603,967. In other words, on $71,669,000 less of imports under the Republican law we received $1,768,000 more of revenue. The average rate of duty on all imports for the month of April was 5.6 per cent.

For the ten months period ended in April, 1916, our total imports amounted to $1,722,400,000, on which revenue was realized in the sum of $171,765,323, or an average rate of duty for the whole period slightly less than 10 per cent. The lowest rate of duty for a corresponding period ever recorded in the history of American commerce and one which should make every Democratic advocate of tariff-for-revenue only hang his head in shame.

For the past ten months ended April, 1913, under Republican law, our total imports amounted to $1,518,039,000 or $174,361,000 less than for the period just past, but revenues were paid in to the federal treasury in the sum of $274,032,090, or nearly $100,000,000 more than the amount realized for the 1916 period.

The main consolation which the administration will draw from our April trade report is what our favorable balance of trade was $156,500,000. This is in marked contrast with the condition of our trade in April, 1914, when the Democratic tariff law was raising havoc with our industries.

During that month the balance of trade was $11,210,000 against us. But April, 1916 was a month in which the ports of this country were glutted with war munitions consigned to the fighting powers in Europe. We may shortly expect another bulletin from Democratic headquarters on "Peace and Prosperity."

PORTSMOUTH FIREMEN HONOR THEIR DEAD

Memorial Services Held Yesterday in the Court Street Christian Church and Firemen Hold
Parade in Their Honor

On Sunday morning the Portsmouth Fire Department and the members of the Franklin Pierce Veteran Firemen's Association held their Memorial exercises in honor of the dead firemen, the services being held at the Court Street Christian church, Rev. Percy W. Caswell, pastor of the church, delivering the Memorial address. The graves of the departed firemen were decorated in the early morning by the members of the decorating committee and at 10:00 o'clock the firemen formed their parade at the Central fire station, where they were joined by the Franklin Pierce Association. The parade was headed by Chief William F. Woods and his assistants, Herbert R. Wallace and Percy D. Hersey. Their route moved from the station to Pleasant, to Congress to Middle to Court streets and direct to the church. The music was furnished by the Eureka Pipe and Drum Corps. Special services were held at the church and the church was well filled by visitors in addition to the members of the department and the Veteran's Association. The address delivered by Rev. Mr. Caswell paid high tribute to the departed firemen. Following the service the parade reformed at the church and returned to the Central Fire station where they were dismissed. The men made a fine showing in their parade the red shirts of the veterans making a pleasing contrast to the conventional blue uniforms of the members of the department. The entire service was impressive and a fitting tribute to the men who practically devote their lives to the saving of property from man's greatest friend and enemy, fire.

CHILDRENS' SUNDAY AT THE NORTH CHURCH

Among the guests were Postmaster John H. Dowd and Assistant Postmaster L. B. Washburn of this city; Postmaster Joseph Warren and Assistant Postmaster Blair of Rochester; Postmaster Joseph Sullivan and Assistant Postmaster George Wells of Somers-

CONTROL OF GRASSHOPPERS

Grasshoppers are again abundant this year in certain sections of New Hampshire.

Experience has definitely proved that an epidemic of grasshoppers can be checked and practically all damage avoided by the prompt use of the special grasshopper bait as recommended last year by the State College and the State Department of Agriculture. To accomplish this, however, there must be a willingness of all the farmers in an infested area to get together and work in harmony, and the remedial measures must be properly attended to. Areas that were properly treated last year show very few grasshoppers this year.

Formula for Grasshopper Bait

The foundation of the bait is coarse bran. Twenty pounds of bran makes enough bait for two acres. With this bran is mixed one pound of paria green in a separate vessel one quart of cheap molasses in stirred into 3-4 gallons of water. Then three lemons or oranges are added to this sweetened water. The juice is squeezed in and the pulp and rind are chopped up fine and put in also. Finally the poisoned bran is molasted with this mixture of molasses, water, and fruit juice. This makes the poisoned bran moist but not sloppy. For larger areas use proportionate amounts of the above ingredients.

The bait is applied broadcast in the early morning, before the sun is up. It must be scattered evenly and thinly. While the odor of the fruit lures the grasshoppers will be attracted to the bait, and will eat it eagerly.

There are certain points to remember in using this bait:

1. The fruit juice must be added just before the bait is applied. Otherwise it will not have much effect. Other ingredients may be mixed the night before, but not the fruit.

2. There is no use whatever in applying any bait after the sun has risen. Sunshine will quickly dry up the bait, and dissipate the odor so that the hoppers will not be attracted to it.

3. The bait must be sown broadcast and thinly, not thrown down in clumps.

4. In treating an infested area the whole section must be gone over. Otherwise hoppers from an untreated portion will move over into a portion that has been cleared, and there will be no

Newspaper Criticism.

There are two kinds of newspaper criticism. One is criticism of matters and things by the newspapers, which base their criticisms on a study of the facts, and the other is criticism of the newspapers by people who in many cases do not fully understand what they are talking about.

Criticism by the newspapers is not always just. Unfortunately there are some newspapers that are not governed by the highest motives, though these are the exception and not the rule. And a newspaper, being a human institution, is liable to mistakes. But the honest newspaper endeavors to be fair and just in its comments upon men and affairs, and in a very large majority of instances it succeeds in this endeavor. It attempts to possess itself of the facts before speaking, and when it speaks it speaks for a purpose. If it is occasionally mistaken it simply proves that publishers are not infallible. But their experience in the study of public affairs, and their aim to deal justly with the men and matters that engage their attention usually result in criticisms that are deserved and just, though at times these may seem harsh to the men who come under the criticism of the press.

The criticism of the newspapers is a very different thing. Most people who criticize the newspaper do so thoughtlessly and with no real knowledge of the conditions under which it is made and conducted. For one thing they have no idea of the pressure under which the newspaperman works. What others take hours to do he must do in minutes. This applies to every department of newspaper work. When there is anything to be reported the facts must be gathered in a hurry, the account must be written in a hurry, the type must be set in a hurry, the proofs read in a hurry and the forms hurried to the press. Hurry is the word in the making of a newspaper, from the first line to the last, and while this condition makes inevitable some mistakes, the wonder of the modern newspaper is that it does as well as it does in view of the conditions under which it is made.

If these things could be understood by the public—something which is impossible—there would be less criticism of the press. Not that the press is above and beyond criticism. It does not claim to be, and some of the criticisms directed against it are deserved. There are cases in which it is guilty of unprincipled utterances and of inexcusable carelessness, but these are the exceptions, as every reasonable person must admit. Taken all in all, the press is worthy of the high place it holds in the public estimation.

The Northwest did not neglect to pay fitting honors to the memory of James J. Hill on the day of his funeral. The public schools and all business places in St. Paul were closed during the funeral hour, and all trains on the three great railroad systems with which he was identified were stopped for five minutes. Mr. Hill was not only a prophet. He was also a performer, and he was not without honor in the country and region where his work was done.

Some forms of lawlessness are too prevalent in the South, but when the wife of Maj. R. B. Moton, successor of Booker T. Washington as the head of Tuskegee Institute, and her brother were compelled to leave a Pullman car on an Alabama railroad the other day and go into a car provided for negroes it showed that there is great insistence on the observance of at least some of the laws.

The American International College at Springfield, Mass., graduated only one student this year, but went through with the commencement exercises the same as if there had been a large class. The graduate was a young woman who under the circumstances had the honor of being president, secretary and treasurer of the class.

Chicago is to experience a building boom in the line of railroad terminal facilities. The railroads operating in that district are to expend $66,000,000 in extending and improving the facilities for handling passengers and freight, and when all is complete these will be second to none in the country.

President Wilson will march at the head of the preparedness parade in Washington June 14, the national Flag Day. It is proper that the country should be adequately prepared for any emergency, but this does not dissipate the hope that the emergency will not come.

David Lamar, the "wolf of Wall street," has gone to the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., under a sentence of two years. If he gets as liberal a discount as some other prisoners have been granted he will not have to stay long.

The picnic season is close at hand, and the fact should have a favorable effect upon Sunday school attendance.

WILSON IN NO HURRY

To Appoint Successor to Justice Hughes on Supreme Court Bench.

Washington, June 12—President Wilson has not yet begun consideration of a successor to Justice Hughes on the supreme court bench. Because of his recent survey of available lawyers prior to the appointment of Justice Brandeis, it was said at the White House today, it would be easy for the President to make up his mind quickly but as the supreme court recess today until October, it was thought likely he would not hurry in making a choice.

Justice Hughes's successor will be the third member of the court named by President Wilson. The resignation today leaves five Republicans and three Democrats on the court. It is expected that Mr. Wilson will appoint a Democrat.

Justice Hughes was assigned to the second judicial circuit, including Vermont, Connecticut, Northern New York, southern New York, eastern New York and western New York. While the President undoubtedly will be urged to select the new justice from the same circuit, it is not believed he will make the appointment on a geographical basis.

BRITISHER DESCRIBES RUSSIAN OFFICERS

London, June 10—An interesting account of a visit to the Russian army before they started their magnificent offensive has been received here from Prof. Bernard Paros, the British official observer. He writes: "I came here with our British general. On our arrival we drove to the staff of this group of armies. We were shown into a large, bare room with hardly anything but maps and a table, and sat and talked with the commander-in-chief at this front. He is now the senior post of the three fronts.

"Our host was a quiet, elderly man of heavy build, who wasted not words, a man whose face suggested the habit of thought and steady purpose. After a while our general arose and presented the Grand Cross and Chain of St. Michael and St. George with a happy recognition of the value of the work of the Russian army for England. Our host spoke a few modest, and well weighed words in reply.

"Both little speeches ended with the certain conviction of coming victory and the Russian general in his mention of the 'strong and stubborn energy' added the significant expression, 'but who is already giving signs of defeat.'

"There has been an interesting visitor here from France, a professor who talks the most inapproachable Russian with all the French graces of diction and delivery. He was sent by his government to tell the Russian army something about the military life of the French at the front, which he did yesterday in a lecture to this large staff.

"There could not have been a better teacher; the professor has for many years worked in Russia, and knew just what Russians, and in particular Russian staff officers would wish to hear. He had served in the French army and had been at the front himself.

"He told us about the German manner of entrenchment and showed us a diagram with sections of their different lines. He had something to say about the Russian prisoners who were sent up to work on the German western front, and managed with infinite danger to scramble their way over into the French lines.

"There was a very impressive picture, given with utmost quietness and without an extra word, of system by which the whole French people had been brought into the work of the French army behind the lines. Shortly and without comment was stated the rate of increase in production of the chief supplies of war, rising in one case to an increase sixty-six fold and in another to 170 fold.

"There was a suppressed exclamation at these staggering figures, which were given without any change of voice.

"But the most interesting was yet to come. It was a brief recital of the French method of attack, as it has come to shape itself in this war. There was nothing said which is not a commonplace for any German officer on the French front, but for us it was of the greatest interest, and one could see how attentively it was followed by the commander-in-chief and by all present.

"The French contribution to the science of method will take its place in military history. Napoleon never formed a school in this or in any other sphere—in fact, he did all he could to avoid doing so, for military genius was to remain as far as possible his own secret.

"There was no school of war on the French side in 1870—only little glimpses of a Dierck or a Chancy. But the picture left with us now was that of a people in arms, taught and led by a patient soldier at its head.

"However, what remained with us after the lecture more than anything else was the feel of a serious effort of all forces, never unnecessary and

CURRENT OPINION

I call you to witness, my fellow countrymen, that I have spent every thought and energy that has been vouchsafed me in order to keep this country out of war.

It cannot be disclosed now—perhaps it never can be disclosed—how anxious and how difficult that task has been, but my heart has been in it. I have not grudgingly a single burden that has been thrown upon me with that end in view, for I knew that not only my own heart, but the heart of all America, was in the cause for peace.

And yet, my fellow citizens, there are some men among us preaching peace who go much further than I can go; not further than I can go in the sentiment of peace, not further than truth warrants them in going in interpreting the desire and sentiment of America, but further than I can follow them; further, I believe, than you can follow them in preaching the doctrine of peace at any price and in any circumstances.

There is a price which is too great to pay for peace, and that price can be put in one word. One cannot pay the price of self respect.

One cannot pay the price of duties abdicated, of glorious opportunities neglected, of character, national character, vindicated and exemplified in action.—By President Woodrow Wilson.

NAVY YARD NOTES

Daniels Issues General Order
Secretary Daniels has issued a general order to the several navy yards on the Atlantic and Pacific directing that all scrap metal be sent to the Portsmouth yard for smelting purposes.

In the future the junk will come along as needed and all that is assembled at the yards on the west coast will be shipped, from time to time by collars to the Portsmouth yard.

Fish the Ideal Warm Weather Food
Fish is an ideal summer food, giving strength without unnecessary warmth.

In warm weather the food problem is vastly different from the same problem in cold weather. During the latter period, foods should supply the body with heat, while in the summer months a food which gives the least possible heat with the requisite amount of nourishment should be selected.

During the cold weather, the average digestion will look after itself, but when warm weather sets in, even the man with a steel armored digestive apparatus needs must beware. This is the reason that many persons practically become vegetarians during the summer.

There are few persons, however, who do not feel the need of one hearty meal a day, and to such fish is to be recommended. Sea foods are instead of impeding the digestion.

Because of the many different ways in which it may be served, fish may appear on one's table either as a "heavy" or as a "light" food. Plainly fried, baked, or broiled, or served as a salad, no more easily digested food of great strength giving qualities can be found.

Served in other manners, it is heavy enough to satisfy a gourmand, without, however, putting his stomach and temper out of gear.

Again, fish is an economical food. Summer, as a rule, is a greater drain on the household purse than is winter. Even though fewer meats be eaten, and meat, that expensive commodity, be eaten more sparingly and seldom, the bills seem to mount. Vegetables are somewhat costly, and fruits even more so. To meet the hundred and one expenses which summer—even a summer in the city—entails, the housewife must keep a sharp eye on her food bill.

Out of a pound of fish she can make a delicious luncheon dish, and if she be clever, have enough left for a salad for supper, or, if the evening be cool, for a warming elowder, which will take the chill off the evening air.

It is generally acknowledged, and generally practiced, too, that meats if used at all should be consumed most sparingly during the warm seasons. Inhabitants of torrid countries live on fish, fruit, and vegetables, relying on the fish for the muscle making elements.

Administration officials and Democratic newspapers lose no opportunity to minimize the effects of the European war on our export trade and resultant prosperity, and to credit it to Democratic legislation and control. They say "Oh, yes, the war helped in the beginning, but today the whole country is prosperous and many industries are running at full capacity without making a dollar's worth of goods for the European powers." Senator Underwood, author of the present tariff law, made such a statement in regard to certain mills in his home city, Birmingham, Alabama, and it transpired that those mills were handling contracts sub-let to them by northern mills handling war orders.

The fact is that the war, and nothing but the war, is to be thanked for our present prosperity; first, because it has curtailed European competition in our market, and, second, because it has expanded our export trade to a point which threatens the stoppage of certain industries because they have used up all their raw material and can secure no more. Every man engaged in business knows there was a terrible depression beginning in 1913, with the Democratic tariff tinkering, and lasting until some two or three months after the war began. As "The Iron Age" expressed it "Those who were weary, almost to hopelessness, with the long fight against adversity, which began in 1913 and seemed destined to continue indefinitely, have been rejuvenated. Today any kind of a plant must be run most inefficiently to have its balances written in red ink." And Senator Newlands, (Dem.) of Nevada, is frank in his statement that the depression was on before the war began.

DEATH OF HENRY A. DREW

Prominent Strafford Resident Familiar at Many Legislatures.

Strafford New Lake, June 12.—"Uncle" Henry A. Drew, well known throughout New Hampshire, and especially to state legislators for a half century back, died here Sunday aged 90 years.

"Uncle" Henry, as he was familiarly called by all who knew him, had a most interesting life, though practically all of it was passed within the borders of this, his native state. He was born in Brookfield but resided in the Straffords for many years.

During his life he was always a familiar figure about the corridors of the state house and was known by leaders and followers alike as "Uncle Henry."

Years ago he was a deputy sheriff in Strafford county and although many interesting happenings and incidents are told, that did fair to make his memory live in this section, none in perhaps of more consequence than his association with the Loversen murder case, a brutal affair, that stirred this section a few years before the Civil war.

Georgiana Loversen, a pretty girl of 16 was missed from her home and foul play was suspected. The officers searched high and low but found no trace of the girl. "Uncle Henry" was then a deputy sheriff and he went to work on the case. He suspected a fellow named Frank Evans and gradually gained the man's confidence. One day he invited Evans to his home and while there entered into a heart to heart talk with him.

"Frank," he said, "I want to help you. Now, people hereabouts are beginning to suspect you and unless you do something you are apt to get into real trouble. I'll tell you what you had better do. You show me where the body is and we'll put it where no one will ever find it."

Unsuspecting, the young man readily assented to this arrangement and even urged the older man to hasten, so that no time would be lost in destroying the trace of the crime.

"Uncle" Henry set a time one night for the trip and along with Evans entered the forests of Northwood, which were then a veritable wilderness. The couple proceeded in silence for a while and at last Evans halted. He knelt before a mound of leaves and upon pushing them aside he revealed the murdered body of Georgiana Loversen.

After uncovering the body of his victim he arose and turned to his companion for aid. But instead of assistance he found himself looking into the muzzle of a revolver. A call from the sheriff brought two men, who had followed them into the wood by appointment, and took charge of the trembling Evans.

Evans was accused of the crime, was tried, convicted and paid the penalty of his deed on the gallows at Concord.

DETROIT TO SPRINGFIELD, ILL., WITH HUDSON SUPER-SIX

"M. D. Morris made a wonderful trip from the factory in Detroit to Springfield, Ill.," said Mr. Jackson, Hudson distributor for this section. Mr. Morris is a Hudson dealer in Springfield and went to Detroit to get a Super-Six and drive it home. He drove the new car from Detroit to Springfield in 15 hours flat. The distance is approximately 520 miles.

"The roads were in bad shape all the way from Detroit to South Bend, Ind., and it rained all the time. Mud up to the hubs but that did not hinder the Super-Six from going right along. After leaving South Bend the roads were much better and good time was made the balance of the trip to Springfield. The car was delivered to an old Hudson admirer."

MEXICAN BOY CAPTIVE BEGS TO BE SHOT

Marathon, Texas, June 2.—Sergeant L. Sturmwald, Troop A, Fourteenth Cavalry, who guarded Lieut. Colonel Alvarez and Manuel Torres, Mexican prisoners in the Bequillas raid, today told a story of conflict between pity and duty in which duty won. He said:

"It was my business to take the prisoners on the long ride to Marathon from the Rio Grande. For the minute it was all the business I had and they were surely watched. Our first camp was at McKinney Springs. There we gave the Mexicans steak and onions and coffee—just what we had."

"Torres is little more than a boy. When we took road again he told me his story. His father, he said, was a poor farmer in the Sacramento district. They had little else and when six months ago, Alvarez at the head of fifty or more bandits told him there were food and new clothing to be had in Gringo stores along the border, he followed. He had been raised, he said, to hate the Gringos and rather liked the idea."

"He told how the band broke into pairs after an American pursuit became a certainty. He had hidden in the desert for three nights until his tongue was swollen and black. It was then that he went to the water hole, though the hole was covered by American cavalrymen and begged a drink."

"As we rode along, he begged me to intercede for him. He showed me a bit of handkerchief that was his mother's. He showed me a bit of ribbon that his senorita had given him as a token of love and luck."

"I pitied him, way down deep, but I could not show my pity. I looked at the officer who had led the boy and thought evil things. I remembered how racking murders had killed a tiny child, and how they had dared to come on American soil."

"I told Torres to be still, that I could do nothing. Then he pleaded to be shot. It would be much more honorable, he said, than to be hanged, as he had heard it was the custom in Gringo land."

"Again I told him be still."

"We drove at night, mostly, to avoid heat and all through the night Torres would ask me in his soft, pathetic Spanish for a quick end."

"You can't appreciate the effect of it all—moonlight and their chains; and the despair of boy who had been led astray. But they're here now and turned over to the sheriff. I'm through, and I've lived up to the oath I took when I enlisted. But, I'm glad I'm through and that oath remains unbroken. My hope is I won't have another detail like it."

RIDE ON COASTER FATAL

West Lebanon Girl Dies From Heart Failure at Salisbury Beach.

Miss Bessie Wentworth, aged 29 of 829 West street, West Lebanon, Me., died in an ambulance at Newburyport on Sunday afternoon after riding in one of the cars on the roller coasters at Salisbury Beach.

She was visiting friends in Georgetown and came to spend the day at the beach with her cousin, Vivian Wentworth. She got into one of the cars on the coaster; when going down the worst dive she said to her companion, "I have lost my breath." A few feet farther on she fell into the lap of her companion and the car was stopped as soon as possible.

She was taken out and put into the ambulance and started for the hospital but died on the way. Dr. R. C. Hurd, medical examiner, pronounced it a case of heart failure caused by the sudden shock to her system. Miss Wentworth is well known in the vicinity of Boston being a graduate nurse from the Malden hospital.

ORPHEUM THEATRE

Thoroughly remarkable yet with the ease of a machine, that makes of a theatre something above its kind in comparison with the houses of like calling is what has won for Legue's Orpheum Theatre, Boston, the universal commendation of theatregoers that appreciate the best in vaudeville. As a vaudeville theatre it is, without contradiction, the most sumptuous and capacious theatre in America devoted to this class of entertainment. When Marcus Loew decided to rebuild the foundation the theatre, which had made his name a constant byword with the people of Boston and New England he called for plans that would assure that the new theatre would surpass any of its kind, and how well he has succeeded is veritably revealed in the new structure now but several months old. He has a playhouse that is a delight to sit in, and to further perfect the attractiveness of the house he is supplying it with the best vaudeville that can possibly be secured. The watchword for this theatre is, "The World's Best Vaudeville." The fact is acknowledged that there is given at the Orpheum the very finest acts obtainable, and that at a price so moderate.

AMERICANISM AND PREPAREDNESS HUGHES' STATEMENT OF ACCEPTANCE

FEASIBLE PLAN FOR FREEING PORTSMOUTH-KITTERY BRIDGE

At the meeting planned for this evening by the Portsmouth Board of Trade and the Portsmouth Building association one of the most feasible plans yet advanced for the freeing of the Portsmouth-Kittery Bridge from tolls will be presented for consideration by Fred M. Sise, president of the Board of Trade. This plan is the outcome of a suggestion made by the Boston and Maine Railroad, or the Portsmouth Kittery Bridge Corporation, at their annual meeting held in the office of Wallace Hackett last week.

The plan as advanced by the corporation is to allow the counties of York, Maine and Rockingham, New Hampshire, to take control of the bridge, by leasing it, legislation passed by both New Hampshire and Maine some two years ago, having given the county commissioners that right. The bridge corporation, which is in reality a holding corporation for the Boston and Maine Railroad, offer the leasing of the bridge to the counties, jointly, at a sum which will cover the up-keep of the bridge, plus a small percentage of the invested capital. The cost to the counties would be paid by the county tax which is not expected to increase this tax to any appreciable degree.

By hiring or leasing the bridge the counties of Rockingham and York would have full control of the bridge but would not have its liabilities, one of the factors which held them from making a purchase of it two years ago when the respective legislatures of Maine and New Hampshire gave them the necessary permission to acquire bridges, hotel men and business men in Maine are anxious that some such plan will be accepted as it means much to them, the bridge being the automobile gateway into the state. They have already built almost perfect roads throughout the entire state and the toll bridge is considered by them to be a blot on the wheels of progress. The freeing of the bridge will also be a great gain for this city and merchants have been working toward this end for several years. The plan will be presented at the Rockingham Hotel this evening by Mr. Sise and will be but one of the big propositions of interest to the residents of this city.

At the meeting held by the directors of the bridge corporation last week this plan was suggested to Mr. Sise, a member of the board of directors of the corporation, and president of the Board of Trade, by Mr. Hobbs, vice president of the corporation and an officer of the Boston and Maine Railroad. The directors of the bridge corporation are James H. Hustis, W. J. Hobbs, Wallace Hackett, Herbert R. Wheeler, Flagg S. Grant, Fred M. Sise, Stephen Decatur and S. Elery Jennison. The officers of the board elected by the meeting are: President, James H. Hustis; vice president, W. J. Hobbs; clerk, Wallace Hackett; and treasurer, Herbert R. Wheeler.

Fully Indorses Platform of Republican Party as Adopted by the Convention Naming Him as Presidential Nominee— Roosevelt Puts String to His Refusal of Progressive Nomination

Chicago, Ill., June 11.—Charles Evans Hughes of New York, has accepted the republican nomination for the presidency of the United States and in his statement to Senator Harding declares that he has accepted and indorses fully the platform of the Republican party as adopted by the delegates to the national convention which has chosen him to lead the party to victory in November. He has affirmed his stand for a firm and unflinching maintenance of all rights of American citizens on land and sea and assails the policies of the present government, calling them weak and vacillating and a "course lamentably wrong" as regards the Mexican policy.

In his acceptance of the nomination he asserted that he did not desire the nomination and would have preferred to remain on the bench of the Supreme court of the United States but he felt it his paramount duty to respond to the call of the party. Charles W. Fairbanks, former Vice President under the first administration of the late William McKinley, was named as the running mate of Mr. Hughes.

The nomination of Justice Hughes came on the third ballot on Saturday after the "Old Guard" had made futile efforts to pick another candidate. All factions of the party have enthusiastically received Mr. Hughes' statement of principles as setting at rest all doubts about the soundness and inflexibility of his views on vital issues. Instead of being held "uncertain" he is now hailed as an American of the finest type.

Roosevelt Refuses Moose Nomination

Col. Theodore Roosevelt has provisionally refused the nomination of the Progressive party but this refusal leaves him a loop hole should he finally decide to run. He has put it square up to the committee of the Bull Moose party and his statement says that if the committee can accept the statement of Mr. Hughes as satisfactory they are to then consider his refusal as final. Col. Roosevelt has refused to discuss the statement of Mr. Hughes in his acceptance of the nomination and has told reporters that he is "out of politics." George W. Welton has left here to visit Col. Roosevelt at Oyster Bay, New York bearing an olive branch from the Hughes forces. In political circles here it is firmly believed that the Colonel will accept the statements of Mr. Hughes as entirely satisfactory and will support his candidacy, thus forming one solid party against the Wilson campaign after his nomination at St. Louis this week.

Mr. Roosevelt's Message Declining
Moose Nomination

Oyster Bay, L. I., Saturday.—Theodore Roosevelt sent the following message late this afternoon to the Progressive National Convention in Chicago declining the nomination for the Presidency:

"To the Progressive Convention:—I am very grateful for the honor you confer upon me by nominating me as President. I cannot accept it at this time.

"I do not know the attitude of the republican party toward the vital questions of the day. Therefore, if you desire an immediate decision, I must decline the nomination. But if you prefer, I suggest that my conditional refusal to run be placed in the hands of the Progressive National Committee.

"Mr. Hughes' statements when he makes them shall satisfy the committee that it is for the interest of the country that he be elected, they can accept accordingly and treat my refusal as definitely accepted.

"If they are not satisfied they can so notify the progressive party, and at the same time they can confer with me and then determine on whatever action we may deem appropriate to meet the needs of the country.

"Theodore Roosevelt."

Statement of Mr. Hughes

"Fully indorsing the platform you have adopted," Charles Evans Hughes on Saturday afternoon telegraphed to Senator Warren G. Harding, chairman of the Republican National Convention at Chicago, that he accepted the Presidential nomination.

The telegram stated that Mr. Hughes had resigned his judicial office and was ready to devote himself unreservedly to the campaign. Mr. Hughes' message follows:

"Mr. Chairman and Delegates:—I have not desired the nomination. I have wished to remain on the bench.

"But in this critical period in our national history I recognize that it is your right to summon and that it is my paramount duty to respond. You speak at a time of national emergency transcending merely partisan considerations. You voice the demand for a dominant, thoroughgoing Americanism with firm protective upholding policies essential to our peace and security, and to that call in this crisis I cannot fail to answer with the pledge of all that is in me to the service of our country. Therefore I accept the nomination.

"I stand for the firm and unflinching maintenance of all the rights of American citizens on land and sea. I neither impugn motives nor underestimate difficulties. But it is most regrettable true that in our foreign relations we have suffered incalculably from the weak and vacillating course which has been taken with regard to Mexico—a course lamentably wrong with regard to both our rights and our duties. We interfered without consistency, and while seeking to dictate when we were not concerned we utterly failed to appreciate and discharge our plain duty to our own citizens.

"At the outset of the administration the high responsibilities of our diplomatic intercourse with foreign nations were subordinated to a conception of partisan requirements and we presented to the world a humiliating spectacle of impotence. Related efforts have not availed to recover the influence and prestige so unfortunately sacrificed and brave words have been stripped of their force by indecision.

"To 'Restore Diplomacy to its Best Standard.'

"I desire to see our diplomacy restored to its best standard and to have these advanced to have no sacrifices of national interest to partisan expediencies, to have the first ability of the country always at its command here and abroad in diplomatic intercourse, to maintain firmly our rights under international law, insisting steadfastly upon all our rights as mutual and fully performing our international obligations, and by the clear correctness and justice of our position and our manifest ability and disposition to sustain them by dignity our place among the nations.

"I stand for an Americanism that knows no ulterior purpose; for a patriotism that is single and complete. Whether native or naturalized, of whatever race or creed, we have but one country, and we do not for an instant tolerate any division of allegiance.

"I believe in making prompt provision to assure absolutely our national security. I believe in preparedness, not only entirely adequate for our defense with respect to numbers and equipment in both army and navy, but with all thoroughness to the end that in each branch of the service there may be the utmost efficiency under the most competent administrative heads and devoted to the ideals of honorable peace.

"We wish to promote all wise and practicable measures for the just settlement of the international disputes. In view of our abiding ideals, there is no danger of militarism in this country. We have no policy of aggression, no lust for territory, no zeal for strife.

"It is in this spirit that we demand adequate provision for national defense and we condemn the inexcusable neglect that has been shown in this matter of first national importance. We must have the strength which self-respect demands, the strength of an efficient nation ready for every emergency.

"His Three Kinds of Preparedness

"Our preparation must be industrial and economic as well as military. Our severest tests will come after the war is over. We must make a fair and wise readjustment of the tariff, in accordance with sound protective principle, to insure our economic independence and to maintain American standards of living.

"We must conserve the just interests of labor, realizing that in democracy patriotism and national strength must be rooted in even handed justice. In preventing, as we must, unjust discriminations and monopolistic practices, we must still be zealous to assure the foundations of honest business.

"Particularly should we seek the expansion of foreign trade. We must not throttle American enterprise here or abroad, but rather promote it and take pride in honorable achievements. We must take up the serious problems of transportation, of interstate and foreign commerce. In a sensible and candid manner and provide an enduring basis for prosperity by the intelligent use of the constitutional powers of Congress so as adequately to protect the public on the one hand and on the other to conserve the essential instrumentalities of progress.

"I stand for the principles of our Civil Service laws. In every department of government the highest efficiency must be insisted upon. For all laws and programmes are vain without efficient and impartial administration.

"I cannot within the limits of this statement speak upon all the subjects that will require attention. I can only say that I fully indorse the platform you have adopted.

"I deeply appreciate the responsibility you impose. I should have been glad to have that responsibility placed upon another. But I shall undertake to meet it, grateful for the confidence you express. I sincerely trust that all former differences may be forgotten and that we may have united effort in a patriotic realization of our national need and opportunity.

"I have resigned my judicial office and I am ready to devote myself unreservedly to the campaign.

(Signed) "Charles E. Hughes."

Not All Peace Among Republicans

But there is not altogether peace in the republican ranks either. There is a disposition on the part of the "Old Guard" to make one last stand for the preservation of their own machinery. It can come in the selection of a chairman of the National Committee. If Mr. Hughes does not indicate who he wants, then the committee of seven which has been named to select the chairman will be supreme. Five of them hold the deepest resentment toward Frank Hitchcock, whom every one had thought would be the logical manager for Mr. Hughes' campaign.

The "Old Guard" does not relish the prominence the onetime National Chairman and Postmaster General has been getting out of being a President maker. Others argue that Mr. Hughes would not likely suggest Mr. Hitchcock. They say this would savor too much of his really having been cognizant of Mr. Hitchcock's pre-convention efforts and in naming him National Chairman would be giving him the reward Mr. Hitchcock seeks.

Whitman a National Figure

The nomination of Justice Hughes makes Governor Whitman a national figure and means that in all probability he will be re-nominated for Governor of New York without opposition.

William Calder, of Brooklyn, will have Mr. Whitman's support for United States Senator. Although the radical progressives, headed by John J. O'Connell, of New York city, as well as Walter P. Johnson, chairman of the State Progressive Committee, are predicting that the progressives will put a ticket in the field and defeat Governor Whitman for re-election, Oscar Straus says that in his opinion the progressives will do nothing in New York this year.

"If we decide not to go nationally we certainly will not go in New York State," said Mr. Straus. "Personally I am in favor of the re-election of Governor Whitman. I think he has made a good Governor and should be returned to office."

It is understood that both George W. Perkins and Mr. Straus assured Governor Whitman several weeks ago that there is no likelihood of the progressives attempting to draft Judge Samuel Seabury merely for the sake of defeating Governor Whitman on account of his efforts to bring about the nomination of Justice Hughes.

New York Delegates en Route Home

Angered because he had refused to send a telegram instructing the delegates who had voted for him in the Convention in opposition to William Howard Taft to withdraw his name, the "Old Guard," aided by many from the New York county delegation, decided that as the national ticket in their estimation was safe they would defeat Governor Hughes if he wanted a renomination. They almost succeeded if the word had not come from Oyster Bay on that memorable night in September that Mr. Hughes must be renominated. It would never have been done.

Therefore, it is the opinion of many that Mr. Hughes today was forced on the Republican Convention as a nominee mainly through the efforts of Theodore Roosevelt.

The burgher of the Republican Convention was Mr. Roosevelt. So long as he remained silent as to who was his choice and there was danger of his gaining strength in the Republican Convention, Mr. Hughes' strength kept growing until it reached the point where not a leader could control the delegates and they began to clamor for the nomination.

"Old Guard" Unable to Unite

The delegates were actuated by a desire to save their local tickets. The "Old Guard" could not unite on a man who would measure up to the expectations of other leaders. Consequently, with Mr. Roosevelt remaining silent and the "Old Guard" groping in the dark, the strength of the late member of the United States Supreme Court kept increasing without his doing one single thing to promote the candidacy.

The man who caused the most wonderment was William Loeb, formerly Mr. Roosevelt's secretary, as well as Collector of the Port of New York. He had been working with might and main to bring about the nomination of his one-time chief.

But he walked about the Blackstone Hotel lobby after the conventions had ended and his face was wreathed in smiles.

"You don't look dissatisfied," a friend remarked.

"I am not dissatisfied," replied the man who "used to take the blame." "In fact I am well pleased," he added.

It was learned that it was Mr. Loeb who advised Mr. Roosevelt last January to come out for Justice Hughes as the one man who could defeat President Wilson, and Mr. Roosevelt agreed with him in that regard. Mr. Loeb also advised Mr. Roosevelt that his coming to Chicago while the Convention was in session would be futile and that the only thing he could hope to gain was a platform that would meet with his approval. Mr. Roosevelt relied on the advice of his one-time secretary.

Herbert, has met with the popularity here that duplicated its experience in other cities that it visited, and many were the regrets that it was to end its stay even in the height of favor. The fact that the company had been playing continuously for more than forty weeks proved quite a lengthy tour, and it had been limited to seven weeks in Boston. But so well has it been received that the management have been prevailed to continue on and it has now settled down to what promises to be a summer run. No more favorably constituted summer offering could have been chosen, and it is a well-known fact that the cool Park Square Theatre is the best summer theatre in New England. During the continued engagement of the "Princess Pat" the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees will be given, and the seats are now selling for the gala holiday matinee Saturday, June 17. Mail orders will be carefully filled.

The political conventions, past and coming, have finally showed the European war somewhat into the background of publicity.

Most welcome is the news that the management of the Park Square Theatre, Boston, takes pleasure in announcing to the effect that "The Princess Pat" will not end its engagement as previously announced, but will continue on at this beautiful playhouse. This delightful opera written by the master of musical composition, Victor

BULL MOOSE LEADERS DENOUNCE ROOSEVELT ACT

Chicago, Ill., Sunday.—The big top is down. But the side show goes on. How long it will last is something no man can tell. There was one man who could have told that up to today. That man is now being denounced by every person who for years worshipped him. Theodore Roosevelt is held in suspicion by the men who have idolized him and followed his leadership. Even he can not tell what the bull moose party will do without him.

Whether the progressives will have a ticket no one can tell. George W. Perkins doesn't know. Victor Blum doesn't know. In fact, nobody knows. The idea prevails here that Theodore Roosevelt will not run against Charles Evans Hughes. William Loeb says he will not.

The republicans are not worrying about the existence of the progressive party. All they are concerned about is who would finance such a party if it should remain. One of the most radical progressives explains the situation as follows:

"We were taken up the mountain side. We were shown the promised land and then we were robbed of our heritage."

Angered because he had refused to send a telegram instructing the delegates who had voted for him in the Convention in opposition to William Howard Taft to withdraw his name, the "Old Guard," aided by many from the New York county delegation, decided that as the national ticket in their estimation was safe they would defeat Governor Hughes if he wanted a renomination. They almost succeeded if the word had not come from Oyster Bay on that memorable night in September that Mr. Hughes must be renominated. It would never have been done.

Therefore, it is the opinion of many that Mr. Hughes today was forced on the Republican Convention as a nominee mainly through the efforts of Theodore Roosevelt.

The burgher of the Republican Convention was Mr. Roosevelt. So long as he remained silent as to who was his choice and there was danger of his gaining strength in the Republican Convention, Mr. Hughes' strength kept growing until it reached the point where not a leader could control the delegates and they began to clamor for the nomination.

"Old Guard" Unable to Unite

The delegates were actuated by a desire to save their local tickets. The "Old Guard" could not unite on a man who would measure up to the expectations of other leaders. Consequently, with Mr. Roosevelt remaining silent and the "Old Guard" groping in the dark, the strength of the late member of the United States Supreme Court kept increasing without his doing one single thing to promote the candidacy.

The man who caused the most wonderment was William Loeb, formerly Mr. Roosevelt's secretary, as well as Collector of the Port of New York. He had been working with might and main to bring about the nomination of his one-time chief.

But he walked about the Blackstone Hotel lobby after the conventions had ended and his face was wreathed in smiles.

"You don't look dissatisfied," a friend remarked.

"I am not dissatisfied," replied the man who "used to take the blame." "In fact I am well pleased," he added.

It was learned that it was Mr. Loeb who advised Mr. Roosevelt last January to come out for Justice Hughes as the one man who could defeat President Wilson, and Mr. Roosevelt agreed with him in that regard. Mr. Loeb also advised Mr. Roosevelt that his coming to Chicago while the Convention was in session would be futile and that the only thing he could hope to gain was a platform that would meet with his approval. Mr. Roosevelt relied on the advice of his one-time secretary.

Herbert, has met with the popularity here that duplicated its experience in other cities that it visited, and many were the regrets that it was to end its stay even in the height of favor. The fact that the company had been playing continuously for more than forty weeks proved quite a lengthy tour, and it had been limited to seven weeks in Boston. But so well has it been received that the management have been prevailed to continue on and it has now settled down to what promises to be a summer run. No more favorably constituted summer offering could have been chosen, and it is a well-known fact that the cool Park Square Theatre is the best summer theatre in New England. During the continued engagement of the "Princess Pat" the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees will be given, and the seats are now selling for the gala holiday matinee Saturday, June 17. Mail orders will be carefully filled.

The political conventions, past and coming, have finally showed the European war somewhat into the background of publicity.

Most welcome is the news that the management of the Park Square Theatre, Boston, takes pleasure in announcing to the effect that "The Princess Pat" will not end its engagement as previously announced, but will continue on at this beautiful playhouse. DOVER LAD IS KILLED IN FALL OVER DAM

YOUNG 15 YEAR OLD BOY DEAD
AND COMPANION HAD NARROW ESCAPE WHEN THEIR BOAT WENT OVER FALLS

Philip Michael, 15, a cripple, living with his parents, at 9 Durell street, Dover, is dead and his companion, Edward Dione, of Central avenue, Dover, had a narrow escape from death when their boat went over the Upper Falls on the Upper Cocheco River Sunday afternoon. Michael was killed by the fall and although he was taken from the water less than five minutes after the fall and physicians and police officers worked over him with the pump, no water was found in his lungs and it was decided by physicians that the boy had been killed as soon as he was thrown over the dam.

Young Dione was saved by Jack Durgin of Dover, who dived into the river for him and dragged him to the shore. He was taken to his home and is now under the care of physicians but high hopes are held for his recovery. The body of Michael was taken from the river at the Central Avenue bridge by Martin Muldree, who was passing along the river in an auto at the time of the accident and raced for the bridge where he captured the floating body with some wire.

The two lads had been paddling in the river above the lower dam for some time, using some sticks for paddles as they had no oars. Owing to the heavy rains of the past week the river is very high and is fully six feet above the dam. The dam is between 12 and 15 feet high. The fast current drove the boat over the falls, smashing it to pieces. Michael, who was obliged to use a crutch, was probably struck by the boat as they went over the falls and was killed outright. Dione is a strong swimmer and this is believed to have enabled him to remain above the water until rescued by Durgin. The boys were swept between the two mills by the swift current and were in the water less than five minutes from the time they went over the dam until taken out at the bridge.

NATURAL LAW PARALLELED ON SPIRITUAL PLANE

Sowing, Reaping Correspond
In Kind, Quality, Quantity.

Sow to the Flesh and Reap Corruption.
Sow to the Spirit and Reap Life Everlasting—Sow Bountifully and Reap Bountifully—Sow Sparingly and Reap Sparingly—Sow Cheapest Seed and Reap Richest Grain—What Shall Our Harvest Be?

Indians, June 11.—Pastor Russell gave a very profitable address here today from the text, "He that soweth bountifully shall reap bountifully; and he that soweth sparingly shall reap sparingly."—2 Corinthians 9:6.
After illustrating his text from nature, and showing that reaping corresponds to sowing, not only in kind, but in both quality and quantity, the speaker demonstrated that the same principle applies on the spiritual plane. These are consecrated to God who have received His Holy Spirit. His mind, His disposition, in proportion as they have lived close to Him, following in their Master's footsteps. According to the measure in which these "sow to the Spirit" will they reap the character of Christ, the fruitage of the Holy Spirit.

The text suggests that the Lord wishes His people to sow bountifully, but to make sure that they are sowing the right kind of seed. There is a principle of justice running throughout the entire matter. God does not say, "Never mind what you do; I will make it all right; for I know that you are imperfect." The principle constantly operates that whoever sows good seed will reap corresponding blessings, but whoever sows evil seed may expect to reap corresponding injury. While Christ's merit covers the Christian's unwitting mistakes, it does not make up for negligence, carelessness, indifference as to the kind of seed sown. "Whoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap."

Before those now children of God had left the world, they found that when they lived in accordance with the will of the fallen human nature, the things from which they expected good results gave only disappointment; that anticipations were much better than the realization. They also found that the following of their own will generally yielded bad fruitage. They had sown wrong thoughts; and those, in turn, brought forth more of the same kind. Then wrong thoughts brought forth wrong deeds; and in turn the wrong deeds developed a wrong character. After they became God's children, the unholy character had to be demolished and a righteous character erected.

Proper Training of Children.
The Pastor then emphasized the importance of parental training of children. If mothers could only know how much power they have in moulding their children's minds, how carefully would they guard their own mental conditions in order to bring into the world noble, upright children! If vicious passions control, if wrong thoughts are harbored, the child will be born with these evil tendencies; and no matter how hard he may try in after years to develop a noble character, he must battle against these evil tendencies throughout life. The father also has special responsibility along this line. If he would have no noble offspring, not only should he be noble himself, but he should see that the mother has proper associations, environment, care and attention. Peculiar responsibility in this direction rests upon Christian parents. As they come to see the principles of God's government, their minds should be filled with thoughts of justice, righteousness, love. These thoughts should be reflected upon their children, who would thus be taught of God. Meekness, gentleness, patience, long-suffering, kindness, love are traits that parents should carefully cultivate. These are qualities of the Holy Spirit which God expects all His children to develop richly in heart and life.

Whatever wrong habits we may have had before we became Christians, God expects us to eradicate these as rapidly as possible by His grace. As beauty of character is manifested by parents, it will be noticed by the children; for children are very quick of discernment and generally have a keen sense of justice. Scarcely much of the disrespect of parents prevalent today and the neglect of parents in their old age result from parental neglect in earlier days. Many parents are reaping the harvest of their own failure to train their children properly early in life.

God's Children Carefully Trained.
What is true of children is true of Christians as God's children. As soon as we enter His family, He puts us to school, daily to learn lessons of meekness, patience, gentleness, brotherly-kindness, love. Thus we become like our Lord Jesus, who always delighted to do the Father's will. It is well for us as Christians to remember that the responsibility of our character development rests with us. God supplies the seed and tells us how to sow it; but He does not sow it for us.

First Conference Held on the Proposed Wage Schedule.

FREIGHT CLERKS WILL NOT STRIKE

Boston and Maine Grants Raise for 1363 Men.

A threatened strike of railroad clerks on the Boston and Maine railroad was averted on Saturday by an agreement, effected by committees representing the officials of the company and the Brotherhood of Railroad Clerks.

The conference was held at the North Station and makes the third settlement between the company and its employees who are organized, during the last two days. By the agreement made, 1363 clerks are affected.

As a result 401 of the clerks will receive a raise of ten cents a day, and the others an increase of 15 cents a day. That is to say an increase of 15 cents a day will be given all clerks now getting up to $2.85 a day, while all those receiving more than that will get an increase of ten cents a day.

This appears to be a compromise. However, the local freight clerks have received nothing from headquarters and one of them stated today that the members of the Brotherhood in this city did not know as to the settlement on the question of overtime work and the vacation period requested in the schedule.
